COURT AND ANDERSON – SEWAGE TRANSFER STATION

Daily Maintenance:

Open both entrance doors to the sewage transfer part of station. Then turn on the exhaust system by using the exterior mounted controls. Proceed to the generator room. You will find the main read-out panels. Check to see if any of the various workings of the station are on alarm. Try pushing the acknowledge button first to clear any false readings. You also have remote controls on the board for the overflow screens in the station. Put both screens thru a test cycle. Always report any malfunction you find that you cannot readily solve to your supervisor. Check the oil and coolant level on the emergency generator. If the generator is in a power loss mode and emits a beeping sound, try resetting the system by following the instructions on the digital read out control box that is attached to the generator. Before entering the main station, you are required to don the appropriate mask and protective clothing. Take note of various gas readings on the board before entering. These must be at acceptable levels first. Always test your protective mask for a proper seal. After you adjust the mask for a comfortable fit, place your hands over the filter cartridges and inhale. If the mask pulls toward your face you know you have a good seal. You will then enter the station to hose down the stainless steel chute that dumps sewage into the transfer trough. Use a rake to clear away plastic bags or bottles from the screen bar system. Be sure to apply the necessary disinfectants and degreasers before and after cleaning the various parts of the overflow screen system. You will then proceed to open the two stairwell aluminum hatches and the one sump pump inspection chamber hatch. Do a visual inspection, if a wash down is needed, then do so. When securing from this maintenance detail, shut all lights and set the exterior exhaust controls back to the automatic phase. Dispose of all contaminated overalls properly. Be sure to wash and disinfect the protective mask before storing, use the available antibacterial wipes.

Monthly Maintenance:

Use the water blow-down system to dislodge any foreign debris from the lower chamber. Check the drive chains and various fittings that may be in need of lubrication. Do a complete wash down of the station. Enter the lower chamber in low tide and remove any debris. Do a complete wash down of the chamber. Never go into the lower chamber alone! Bring a large flashlight with you. As always, wear the proper clothing and mask before entering.

KENNEDY PUMP STATION

Daily Maintenance:

Check both sifting stations first. If the dumpsters are half or more full, contact the sewer department. Have them vac-alld out. Open the control panel and put the station through a manual test cycle. Report or correct any problems found with the station. Clean away any debris that may have missed the dumpster. Use the broom, shovel or rake that are provided. Continue on to the main pump house. Check oil levels on all three pumps before running them through a test cycle. Log all results and initial the check sheet.

Monthly Maintenance:

Use the blow down system on each sifting station to clean out any foreign debris that may have lodged on the bottom. You will need the sewer jet truck to accomplish this. Grease all fittings and lubricate the drive chains.
